

Financial Insights for Our Generation

Welcome to the Young Investors Newsletter

Welcome to the March edition of the Young Investors Newsletter. Part of our ongoing mission is to help you identify ways to build your financial foundation. This month we're featuring an article from Evan Kvitem CRPC® about a common mistake that is costing many young investors a lot of money. Check it out and make sure you're not one of them!

Upcoming Night at Surly Brewery

Over time we will be organizing events tailored to the Young Investor community. Many of these events will be informative events, designed to help bring additional resources to you. Others will be more laid-back, social events. We have decided to kick off the event series with a social evening at Surly Brewery on March 30th. This will be a fun time for us to gather and mingle. Follow the link in this newsletter for further details and to RSVP. This event is open to anyone interested, so please share this invitation. We look forward to seeing you there!

FEATURED ARTICLE

By Evan Kvitem, CRPC®

Would you rather have an annual salary of $50,000 or $51,500? The answer may seem obvious, but when faced with this decision, countless people end up taking the lower salary without even realizing it. This question will never be asked so directly, but you have to learn how to read between the lines.

Market Insights

In other news, you may have caught wind that February was our first full month under a new administration in the U.S. There has been a lot of speculation about the potential risks and/or opportunities ahead of us. We're including in this month's newsletter a nice article about what may be in store for us over the remaining First 100 Days of the Trump presidency.

Cheers!

Erik, Evan, and Sean
